Never Before
Never Again

Charlestown High School 240 Medford Street Charlestown, MA 02129

Without friends no one would choose to live, though he had all other goods; even rich men and those in possession of office and of dominating power are thought to need friends most of all; for what is the use of such prosperity without the opportunity of beneficence, which is exercised chiefly and in its most laudable form towards friends? Or how can prosperity be guarded and preserved without friends? The greater it is, the more exposed is it to risk. And in poverty and in other misfortunes men think friends are the only refuge. It helps the young, too, to keep from error; it aids older people by ministering to their needs and supplementing the activities that are failing from weakness; those in the prime of life it stimulates to noble actions . . . for with friends men are more able both to think and to act.

Yearbook 2001

Teaching-especially teaching in an urban school system-is never easy. Like your parent's the Charlestown High teachers and administrators try our best to educate you, to help all of you to be better persons. We certainly have not been successful in all cases. But, for most of you, I believe that we have made a difference in your lives.

Your teachers and I want you to be an educated person: one who is literate, with a sense of the past, a vision for the future, an appreciation of the arts, a feeling for the suffering of the less fortunate, a commitment to decency and honesty, and a willingness to serve the community.

We try to instill in you love of learning and passion for excellence. We expect you to be independent learners and achievers all your lives. We want you to be able to appreciate the fruits of human achievements. Above all else, we hope that you would never be indifferent to human suffering and possess the moral fortitude to challenge inhumane deeds in adverse times.

If you can do that, then we have succeeded.

The friendship of young people seems to aim at pleasure; for they live under the guidance of emotion, and pursue above all what is pleasant to themselves and what is immediately before them. . . . . This is why they quickly become friends and quickly cease to be so; their friendship changes with the object that is found pleasant, and such pleasures alters quickly. Young people are amorous too; for the greater part of the friendship of love depends on emotion and aims at pleasure; this is why they fall in love and quickly fall out of love, changing often within a single day. But these people do wish to spend their days and lives together; for it is thus that they attain the purpose of their friendship.
